Financing 'Rebels'

Representatives of more than 30 Black African nations, many of them recipients of American foreign aid, met recently to parcel out funds to "rebel" or subversive organizations seeking to overthrow White governments in Africa.

The group, calling itself the Organization of African Unity, has claimed it is "free of outside influence." But word leaked out that it had received "modest help" from Yugoslavia and two unidentified Arab nations. It formerly got help from Indonesia, when that country was under the rule of Communist-oriented Sukarno.

Very interesting.

In view of the recent furore over clandestine C.I.A. financial aid to college student groups and other organizations, we wonder how much American tax money is finding its way by devious routes into the hands of subversives in Africa.
